CONTENT

A prerequisite for successful international exposure and competitiveness on global markets, and development of world-class company is use of managerial models and concepts which develop employee managerial behaviour and leadership as part of their competences and those of an organization.

Leadership and management do not reside solely in formal managers - but in every person at every level who acts as a leader to a group of followers. Basic role of a leader is his/her emotional role! The emotional dimension of management define whether other dimensions of organization will work as well.

The lecturer will present a model of leadership, that is emotionally compelling to others. Emotionally intelligent leadership is today necessary for successfulness of the company and this programme gives you cues to develop employees as a main driving force of organisational development.

You will learn the methods for development of the EI on all levels in the organisation and how it helps building competitive advantage.

The lecturer will include development of employees and their engagement in the organisation. He will present the role of management and the opportunities that emotional intelligence brings to the employee and company success.

“Management, which is not emotionally compelling impedes market growth and company competitiveness.”

SEMINAR PROGRAMME

The conference programme will run with the main thread between employee development and the emotional intelligence to the model for utilization the EI in strengthening company brand reputation and product or service competitiveness.

Module 1: Development of employees and emotional intelligence

Module 2: Emotional Intelligence in teams and organisations: How should leaders and company owners integrate management into their organisations?

Module 3: The model of Emotionally Intelligent management in the organisation

Module 4: Development and strengthening of the company brand and reputation: Emotional intelligence in the organisation

1. Organisational self-awareness	Knowing the organisational strengths and weaknesses, being aware of emotions in the organisation and foster a company culture characterised by openness, trust and pride.
2. Organisational self-management	Monitoring and managing emotions in the organisation so that they work for and not against the organisation.
3. Organisational self-motivation	Inspiring Heart Work. Creating an Employeeship culture. Mobilising everyone's energy to win.
4. Organisational social awareness	Knowing and understanding the emotions, needs and concerns of the stakeholders.
5. Organisational social skills	Building and maintaining good relationships between the organisation and its stakeholders and among the employees of the organisation.

*Claus Møllerjev concept of organizational EI helps to achieve business results.

Such management and emotionally intelligent leadership can no doubt be learnt. The question for all managers in companies is, how to relate good managerial behaviour and leadership with world-class competitiveness and business successfulness.
